DRISHTI EXHIBITION

Drishti, a legacy 38 years old still going on as one of the best experience SGGS has to offer. Whether be it the 3 days exhibition or any other activity offered by the team. An experience portraying the artistic side of the engineering students, proving that we are the best at anything we lay our hands on. The Drishti Exhibition showcases each and every aspect of life which is out there. All the sections, each related to something deeper in the consciousness, making others motivated to explore about themselves and try out a wide array of activities other than academics. The display of each and every artwork be it a drawing, a painting or a sketch. Each individual artwork had a message hidden behind its beauty. Some of the literature makes your intellect tingle and crave for more and more of the knowledge. While some make your conscience work up and make you evaluate how they (the artists) have been viewing this prejudiced society. Every fact regarding the modern technology and development of the sciences educates you. And makes you more aware of what the world has to offer and what you need to develop within you. The Exhibition was successfully held from 26th February to 29th February 2020. The visitors were enthusiastic to see the exhibits and the team was delighted to see the happy faces of the students while they were clicking pictures and having great time with their friends. The exhibition had a special visitor, Prarthana Behere, famous Marathi and Hindi Actress. We Congratulate the team and appreciate their efforts.

TIME TO OPEN THE BLINFOLDS

"Health is wealth ", isn't it just a proverb with three words and 14 letters which we have heard since our childhood. Our health is what remains with us when all our wealth and luxuries which we have earned are lost. But the bitter truth is that we people have never considered our health as our true wealth. And the far more bitter truth than this is that our world was never potentially prepared for the circumstances of any global epidemic.

A deadly virus named 'Corona' is spreading like a wild forest fire (Even the bushfire of Australia didn't spread so rapidly) in every direction with a ferocious speed, all over the globe, we can get the meaning of the above saying in its true senses. Our world has come to halt to cope up with the uncontrollable spread of this life-threatening 'COVID-19', whose cure is yet not known to humanity. This is the biggest ever factory shut down in history since WW-2. The economic impact of the growing coronavirus outbreak is shifting from service-driven industries like hotels and restaurants to the manufacturing sector, leading to a synchronized shutdown of heavy industry that historians and industry experts say is unlike any seen since the 1940s.

Our human race is causing too much harm to our nature in an endless manner. As a result, there have been many drastic changes in environmental patterns since last two decades. Our earth has warned us so many times about our pitiful activities and the destruction which it may cause to all of us in a near future but we never paid heed to any of these warnings and today only we are the one who is responsible for whatever that's happening around. I don't think that we are ever going to have such a huge shut down all over the world to cope up with the issues like 'air pollution' and 'global warming'. Why? Because we humans tend taking actions only when death is standing right in front of us, staring us right back into our blind eyes! We don't take vital decisions and actions as long as something doesn't affect us or our lives directly.

As every coin has two sides so as every topic, there are some positive effects, as all the activities have come to halt. Rate of air pollution has decreased at a large extent which can save many lives as compared to the deaths caused by this virus. People get to spend quality time with their loved ones and with themselves too. Every epidemic is a tough phase for humans out there and while taking all the vital measure and precautions, to fight back with this "invisible enemy" we need to make sure that we deal it with unity and patience as the whole world is our family (Vasudhaiva kutumbakam).
